

Be dingo-safe!

- ✓ Never feed dingoes.
- ✓ Always stay within arm's reach of children, even small teenagers.
- ✓ Walk in groups and carry a stick.
- ✓ Do not run. Running or jogging can trigger a negative interaction.
- ✓ Camp in fenced areas when possible.
- ✓ Secure all food, rubbish, fish and bait (even on a boat moored close to shore).
- ✓ Never store food or food containers in tents.
- ✓ No food to lakeshores.

Dingo safety information and tide times

Tips for fishers

Watch your back! Dingoes can appear at any time.

Keep all fishing gear, bait, berley and catch that you're not using in a closed vehicle.

It is an offence to:

- hang bait or berley bags on the outside of vehicles, in trees or have these lying around.
- throw any fish or fish remains and bait to dingoes or other wildlife.

Do not throw fish scraps in the ocean.

Dispose of fish remains in a bin or bury them deeper than 50cm.

Did you know?

- It is better to bury your fish scraps in a deep hole (just below the high tide mark), so there's at least 50cm of sand above the top of the scrap pile to the lip of the hole.
- It's best to do this when dingoes aren't around so they don't associate people with food.
- If they find the scrap hole on their own, it's a more natural discovery—just as if dead marine animals are washed up and covered over with sand by the last tide.
- Cleaning fish in camp sites is not permitted.

If you feel threatened by a dingo

- Stay calm.
- Stand up to your full height.
- Face the dingo.
- Keep your arms close to your body, and keep facing the dingo.
- Calmly back away to a safe area, preferably a vehicle or fenced area.
- If in pairs or a group, stand back to back.
- Confidently call for help.
- Do not run or wave your arms.

Be dingo-safe!

Feeding dingoes puts yourself and others at risk of attack. Keep bait and catch containers firmly sealed. Bury and cover fish remains in a deep hole.
